Robert W. Harned's remarkable menagerie

Robert W. Harned, a self-taught craftsman, moved to Akron for a job at Goodyear in 1945. He worked for 35 years on a traveling display that appeared at Akron department stores.

Goodyear Heights resident Robert W. Harned makes a night adjustment to one of the colorful attractions in his miniature circus in 1945. He worked for 35 years on The Greatest Little Show on Earth, a traveling display that appeared at Akron department stores.

Harned had the most amazing menagerie in town.

A colorful parade of clowns, elephants, acrobats, gorillas, tigers and tamernts filled the Great American Circus in the 1940s and 1950s. It was called “The Greatest Little Show on Earth,” a traveling display that appeared at Akron department stores.

Harned, a self-taught craftsman, made small-scale versions of his childhood favorites, including elephants, acrobats, gorillas, tigers and tamernts.

The traveling circus roamed the premises.
