William C. Fiala, professor of practice in the School of Allied Health Technology, lectured at the Ohio State Society of American Medical Technologists' 2019 Spring Education Seminar in Chillicothe, Ohio on April 13, 2019. His program was on compliance issues surrounding physicians and nurse practitioners reporting evaluation and management services. Attendees received continuing education credit. Founded in 1939, American Medical Technologists is an internationally recognized certification agency and membership society for allied health professionals including medical technologists, medical laboratory technicians, medical assistants and allied health instructors.