

Supreme Court Podcast Taping

Friday, April 20th • 3:00 to 5:00 pm

Brennan Courtroom (Rm. 180)

Dan Epps is an Associate Professor of Law at Washington University in St. Louis, where he teaches and writes about criminal law and criminal procedure. He was a law clerk for Justice Kennedy in October Term 2009 before working as an appellate and Supreme Court practitioner at King & Spalding in Washington, D.C. and then a Climenko Fellow & Lecturer on Law at Harvard Law School. He is an active participant in #appellatetwitter (@danepps). He's also a blue belt in Brazilian jiu-jitsu and a pretty good amateur mixologist.

Ian Samuel is a Climenko Fellow and Lecturer on Law at Harvard Law School, and clerked for Justice Scalia in October Term 2012. He was also a Bristow Fellow in the Office of the Solicitor General in October Term 2009, and an appellate litigator in the Justice Department's Civil Division. He has two cats and nearly as many opinions, which can be found on Twitter at @isamuel.

Join us for a live recording of the nationally acclaimed First Mondays podcast. You'll hear insider analysis of the Supreme Court cases.

"First Mondays is a podcast about the Supreme Court, co-hosted by Dan Epps and Ian Samuel and produced by Melody Rowell. Recorded each week that the Court is in session, Dan and Ian talk about upcoming cases, break down the Term's major (and not-so-major) arguments, analyze opinions, gossip about Court intrigue, and make wildly inaccurate predictions."

(<http://www.firstmondays.fm>)

Sponsored by: Law Student Affairs

and the

Center for Constitutional Law at Akron
@conlawcenter

